About the Larry Mitchelson Fine Arts Award

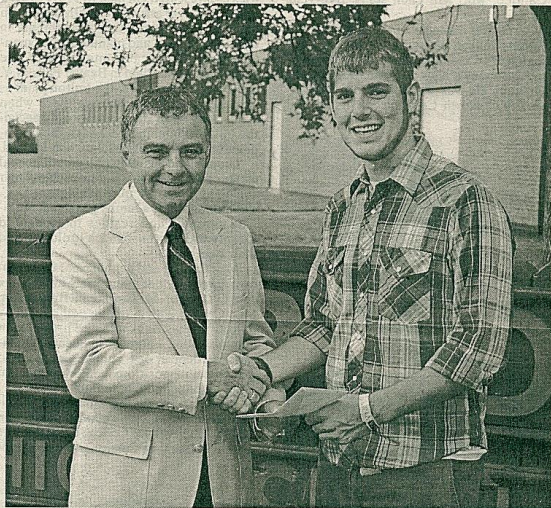

Larry Kenneth Mitchelson taught elementary art in the Fulton (New York) Consolidated School District for 34 years (1969 – 2003). Affectionately known as “Mr. Mitch”, he earned the respect of his students and the Fulton community as a teacher and artist. Larry passed away suddenly on June 2, 2024, at the age of 76.

This award is given through the loving generosity of his son and daughter-in-law, Randy and Susan Mitchelson via the Larry Mitchelson Scholarship Foundation, Inc. This organization was founded in 2003 and began awarding scholarships in 2004. In 2006, the organization earned recognition from the Internal Revenue Service as exempt from Federal income tax under section 501c3 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Art and Economics for Sixth Graders

Fulton graduate receives art scholarship
